

Dear Rector of the Stockholm School of Economics!

Honourable speakers!

Dear participants, organizers and sponsors!

Ladies and Gentlemen!

It is a great honour to address you at the opening of this conference that is aimed towards the development of positive leadership, which brings up satisfied and motivated employees. Today I am very proud that apart from other outstanding speakers I have a chance to introduce to you a prominent Israeli speaker, lecturer of Harvard University, Professor Tal Ben-Shahar. We, Israelis, believe in a democratic society, we believe in positive psychology, we believe in positive relationships and positive and ethical leadership.

I am really excited to see here today such a fully crowded hall and so many interested business people. So, I would like to use this opportunity and thank all the organizers and sponsors of this conference, especially the Stockholm School of Economics in Riga, as well as to wish all the participants of the conference successful implementation of the main ideas of positive leadership! I truly believe that this conference will help you to achieve successful business goals and to promote forming better environment not only inside your teams, but all around the society. I wish you a fruitful day!
